ABOUT FSP

At Grantmakers for Southern Progress, we know that the South incubates ideas and actions the rest of the nation follows. At its worst, the South has laid the blueprint for dehumanization and harm. At its best, the South has created the conditions for real transformation by practicing community care for the most vulnerable among us, and envisioning liberation for us all.

Fellows for Southern Progress (FSP) is an innovative leadership development program that helps participants develop the knowledge and skills necessary to support grassroots movements and structural change in the South. Together, we are reckoning with philanthropy’s complicated history and building a future where our communities can thrive.

We know a more just and equitable South is possible. We believe philanthropy will help get us there.

We are building a community of changemakers in the South who are accountable to the region, the philanthropic sector, and each other in the service of justice.

Will you join us?
Your Investment

By sponsoring FSP, you will be supporting all aspects of our programming, including but not limited to:

- The cost of hosting three in-person gatherings;
- Our resource apothecary including program-related books, articles, music, art, and more;
- Monthly coaching sessions with FSP faculty and additional consultants;
- The cost of program materials and access supports, including literature, care packages, and more;
- Ensuring movement leaders are equitably compensated for time working with participants;
- Scholarships for participants.

Our Commitment

GSP’s mission is to help achieve significant and sustained progress in the economic, social, and political outcomes of people who are the most vulnerable in the South.

Through FSP, we are building a community of allies preparing to lead foundations advancing structural and cultural change resulting in equitable outcomes for Black, Brown, and Indigenous communities across the region.
